14 MISSING ON FLIGHT ACROSS ALASKAN RANGE

JUNEAU, Alaska, Nov. 25—
(UP)—Fear that a plane bearing 14 persons on a flight from Cordova may have crashed caused Hugh Brewster, aeronautics inspector, to authorize a search today.
The plane was more than 30 hours overdue.

The tri-motored monoplane piloted by Chester Brown, had not been sighted at Skagway. It was carrying besides the pilot, a flight mechanic and 12 passengers.

Brewster said Pilot Sheldon Simmons would conduct the search.

The plane left Cordova on a scheduled flight to Juneau. The route is about 600 miles over rough, mountainous country. The rugged White Horse mountain range lies between Cordova and Skagway.

Brewster said Pilot Brown was considered a veteran on the route.

GOVERNOR SEES CHILD, RESCUED NO INCREASE IN AFTER TRAGEDY, OHIO'S BUDGET DIES OF SHOCK

COLUMBUS, Nov. 25—(UP)—
The state's budget for the 1937-1938 biennium will be held as nearly as possible to the level of 1936 governmental expenditures, Governor Davey announced today.

"In some departments, of course, it will be possible to effect additional economies, reduce appropriations, but in others, such as the welfare department, it is probable that increased costs will make necessary increased appropriations," Governor Davey said.

Balance Five Millions

Indications are now, the governor added, that the state will have a comfortable, unencumbered balance in the treasury at the end of this year. He said he hoped this might be as much as $5,000,- 000.

Pointing to the need for improvements and new buildings at state institutions, the governor said it is his hope that a five-year or ten-year building program can be worked out that can be financed out of current revenues.

"We shall try to obtain federal aid for such a program, if federal funds are still to be available," he added.

The governor will confer next month with a committee representing the probate judges of the state over a proposed plan for revamping the state's present laws governing institutional care for the mentally ill, to make possible curative treatment for patients without their first having to be declared insane and committed to state hospitals.

This conference, he said, will be held sometime between Dec.
10 and 15.

FAMILY DENIES LINDY MISSING

Famous Flier Not Reported
Since Leaving Dublin
Two Days Ago

LONDON, Nov. 25—(UP)—The whereabouts of Col. Charles A.
Lindbergh, trans-Atlantic flier, became an international mystery today despite the insistence of members of his household that he was safe.

The Lindbergh estate in Kent
and the Croydon airport were deluded with telephone calls inquiring for the flier, unreported
for more than 24 hours after he left Dublin on the short flight to England.

The mystification and interest increased hourly when it became generally known Lindbergh was not reported anywhere in the British Isles after his departure from Dublin by airplane presumably for Croydon.

His disappearance was complicated by the fact that the flier
frequently keeps his destinations
secret when flying about the country here or at home in the United States.

The United Press inquired at Dublin, Belfast, Croydon and at Cardiff, in Wales, where Lindbergh has relatives—but without locating anyone who would admit having seen the flier or knowing
his present whereabouts.

Several of the telephone calls
to his residence were said to be trans-Atlantic—and the mystery deepened with the passing of the second day since Lindbergh waved
farewell to friends at Dublin.

yards in some cases.

that demands for wage increases

COMMUNISM HIT IN AGREEMENT SIGNED AT NOON

Condemnation of Stickling
Believed Behind Feuhrer's
Action With Nipponese

ITALY MAY FOLLOW SOON

Secret Military Clauses
Reported in Document

BERLIN, Nov. 25 — (UP)—
Germany and Japan, symbols of military might in Europe and far off Asia, banded today in a fight against communism — a fight
which is regarded as a warning to Soviet Russia.

It was announced that Joachim
Von Ribbentrop, ambassador to Great Britain and Kintomo Viscount Mushakoe, Japanese ambassador to Germany, signed the agreement at noon in behalf of
Emperor Hirohito and Feuhrer
Adolf Hitler.

As announced officially, the agreement is directed against the third or Communist International,
the supreme communist body
which links branches all over the world, whose headquarters are in Moscow.

It does not mention Russia, and Russia denies that the international is connected with the Russian government.

Secret Clauses Hinted

Abroad it was reported despite denials that the agreement contains secret clauses providing for diplomatic and military cooperation.

As it is, the agreement as announced, with three brief articles and supplements, was a bitter denunciation of communism.

It calls the work of the international a menace to the internal welfare of nations and to world
peace, accusing it of aiming to disintegrate all existing governments by all possible means.

It provides for exchange of information regarding the work of the international and, in supplements, provides first for the
"harsh measures within existing laws against those at home or abroad, directly or indirectly, actively in the interests of the communist international or favoring its work of destruction; "secondly stipulating that the governments will cooperate to provide information and effect propaganda
measures to combat the international. A permanent committee is set up to propose measures to be taken.

Agreement Five Years

The agreement is to be for five years, and other governments are

BRITISH DEPOT SHIP STEAMING TOWARD SPAIN

LONDON, Nov. 25—(UP)—A
British depot ship, vanguard of a fleet, steamed across the Mediterranean toward Spain today and 10 more warships were ready to follow it from Malta. All shore
leaves at Malta were cancelled.

In Berlin, news was expected at any moment that Germany and Japan had signed an agreement expressing their mutual opposition to communism and inviting other nations to join them in opposing it.

Officially, the British fleet is going to Spain to replace ships already there and the shore leave
was cancelled because of a big storm. Actually, the move was regarded here as a notification to the Spanish nationalists that Great Britain does not intend to tolerate interference with its ships in any nationalist attempt to blockade
Barcelona.

Officially also, the German-Japanese agreement is merely an expression of their detestation of Bolshevism. Actually, a full outline of the agreement received in diplomatic quarters here discloses the agreement as one purporting to find
Germany and Japan in a business-like arrangement that would be aimed at Russia.

SEVEN AGENCIES OPEN INQUIRIES IN TRAIN CRASH

Aid in Rescue Work

CHICAGO, Nov. 25—(UP)—Seven agencies sought in the tangled wreckage of two elevated trains
and testimony of horror-shocked witnesses today the explanation of an unusual elevated train accident
in which nine persons were dead
and at least 58 injured.

The dead:

Mary Mullen, 26
Quinn Morrison, 30
R. F. Larson, 36
Vera Le Febure, 35
Joseph C. Dittendall, 55
Samuel Schwartz, 52
Raymond Winberg, 45
J. J. Borchardt, 55
Nell Wilson, 45.

After a night of horror, heroism
and tense human drama, investigation was undertaken by the Illinois
Commerce Commission, the Cook
county coroner, Chicago police,
the Chicago Rapid Transit line,
Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad, Interstate Commerce
Commission and city council.
Investigation centered on:

Account Unsatisfactory

1. Engineer Van Rensselaer
Grooms reportedly "unsatisfactory" account of how he drove his ponderous, all-steel North Shore express down a mile-and-
one-half straightway and piled at 40 miles-an-hour into the halted
local "EL" train jammed with home-bound commuters.

2. Why the eight-car "EL"
train stood at full-stop on an express track used by the speedy inter-urban trains.

3. The composition of the local train, with a wooden coach
as last car. Between the steel seventh car and the bludgeoning express train, the wooden car was smashed to matchwood and its human cargo catapulted in squirming heaps in the street 20 feet below.

It was an accident which probably couldn't have happened anywhere but Chicago, where an amazingly-efficient transit system
routes heavy Milwaukee-Chicago electric trains onto the regular elevated tracks and brings them down around the famous "loop" to pick up or deliver passengers amid
the skyscrapers.

The electric rocket around the loop at intervals of a few minutes.
In the suburbs the fast trains are routed around the locals. It had been the boast of the Chicago Rapid Transit lines that it had carried more than 160,000,000 passengers a year, with only three deaths
over a 10-year period.

FAMILY DENIES LINDY MISSING

Famous Flier Not Reported
Since Leaving Dublin
Two Days Ago

LONDON, Nov. 25—(UP)—The whereabouts of Col. Charles A.
Lindbergh, trans-Atlantic flier, became an international mystery today despite the insistence of members of his household that he was
safe.

The Lindbergh estate in Kent
and the Croydon airport were deluded with telephone calls inquiring for the flier, unreported
for more than 24 hours after he left Dublin on the short flight to England.

The mystification and interest
increased hourly when it became
generally known Lindbergh was
not reported anywhere in the British Isles after his departure from Dublin by airplane presumably for Croydon.

His disappearance was complicated by the fact that the flier
frequently keeps his destinations
secret when flying about the country here or at home in the United States.

The United Press inquired at Dublin, Belfast, Croydon and at Cardiff, in Wales, where Lindbergh has relatives—but without
locating anyone who would admit
having seen the flier or knowing
his present whereabouts.

Several of the telephone calls
to his residence were said to be
trans-Atlantic—and the mystery
deepened with the passing of the second day since Lindbergh waved
farewell to friends at Dublin.

COMMUNISM HIT IN AGREEMENT SIGNED AT NOON

Condemnation of Sticking

Action With Nipponese

ITALY MAY FOLLOW SOON

Secret Military Clauses
Reported in Document

BERLIN, Nov. 25 — (UP) —
Germany and Japan, symbols of
military might in Europe and far
off Asia, banded today in a fight against communism — a fight
which is regarded as a warning to Soviet Russia.

It was announced that Joachim
Von Ribbentrop, ambassador to Great Britain and Kintomo Viscount Mushakoe, Japanese ambassador to Germany, signed the
agreement at noon in behalf of
Emperor Hirohito and Feuhrer
Adolf Hitler.

As announced officially, the agreement is directed against the third or Communist International,
the supreme communist body
which links branches all over the world, whose headquarters are in Moscow.

It does not mention Russia, and Russia denies that the international is connected with the Russian government.

Secret Clauses Hinted
Abroad it was reported despite denials that the agreement contains secret clauses providing for diplomatic and military cooperation.

As it is, the agreement as announced, with three brief articles and supplements, was a bitter denunciation of communism.

It calls the work of the international a menace to the internal
welfare of nations and to world
peace, accusing it of aiming to disintegrate all existing governments by all possible means.

It provides for exchange of information regarding the work of
the international and, in supplements, provides first for the
"harsh measures within existing laws against those at home or
abroad, directly or indirectly, actively in the interests of the communist international or favoring its work of destruction; secondly stipulating that the governments will cooperate to provide information and effect propaganda
measures to combat the international. A permanent committee is set up to propose measures to be taken.

BRITISH DEPOT SHIP STEAMING TOWARD SPAIN

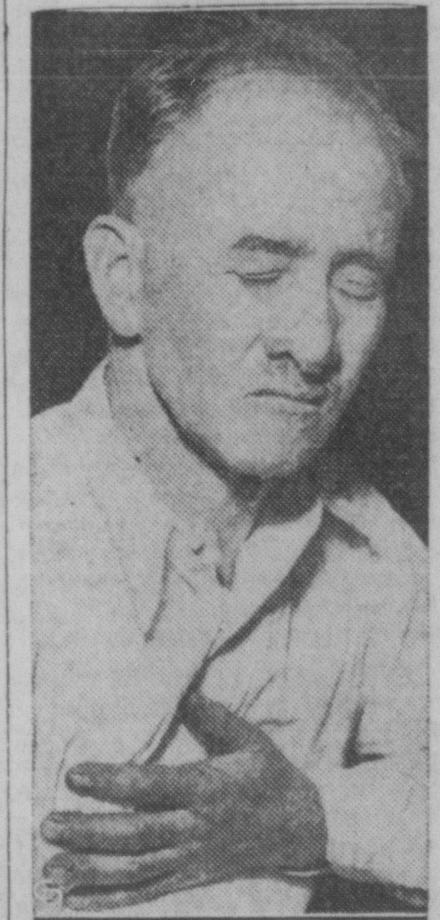

LONDON, Nov. 25—(UP)—A
British depot ship, vanguard of a fleet, steamed across the Mediterranean toward Spain today and
10 more warships were ready to follow it from Malta. All shore
leaves at Malta were cancelled.

In Berlin, news was expected at any moment that Germany and Japan had signed an agreement expressing their mutual opposition to Communism and inviting other nations to join them in opposing it.

Officially, the British fleet is going to Spain to replace ships already there and the shore leave
was cancelled because of a big storm. Actually, the move was regarded here as a notification to
the Spanish nationalists that Great Britain does not intend to tolerate interference with its ships in any nationalist attempt to blockade
Barcelona.

Officially also, the German-Japanese agreement is merely an expression of their detestation of Bolshevism. Actually, a full outline of the agreement received in diplomatic quarters here discloses the
agreement as one purporting to find
Germany and Japan in a business-
like arrangement that would be
aimed at Russia.

Aid in Rescue Work

CHICAGO, Nov. 25—(UP)—Seven agencies sought in the tangled wreckage of two elevated trains
and testimony of horror-shocked
witnesses today the explanation of
an unusual elevated train accident
in which nine persons were dead
and at least 58 injured.

The dead:
Mary Mullen, 26
Quinn Morrison, 30
R. F. Larson, 36
Vera Le Febure, 35
Joseph C. Diffendal, 55
Samuel Schwartz, 52
Raymond Winberg, 45
J. J. Borchardt, 55
Nell Wilson, 45.

After a night of horror, heroism
and tense human drama, investigation was undertaken by the Illinois
Commerce Commission, the Cook
county coroner, Chicago police,
the Chicago Rapid Transit lines,
Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad, Interstate Commerce
Commission and city council.
Investigation centered on:

Account Unsatisfactory

1. Engineer Van Renselaer
"Grooms" reportedly "unsatisfactory" account of how he drove
his ponderous, all-steel North Shore express down a mile-and-
one-half straightway and piled at 40 miles-an-hour into the halted
local "EL" train jammed with
home-bound commuters.

2. Why the eight-car "EL"
train stood at full-stop on an express track used by the speedy
inter-urban trains.

3. The composition of the local train, with a wooden coach
as last car. Between the steel seventh car and the bludgeoning express train, the wooden car was smashed to matchwood and its human cargo catapulted in squirming heaps in the street 20 feet below.

It was an accident which probably couldn't have happened anywhere but Chicago, where an
amazingly-efficient transit system
routes heavy Milwaukee-Chicago elevated trains onto the regular elevated tracks and brings them
down around the famous "loop" to pick up or deliver passengers amid
the skyscrapers.

The electric rocket around the
loop at intervals of a few minutes.
In the suburbs the fast trains are routed around the locals. It had been the boast of the Chicago Rapid Transit lines that it had carried more than 160,000,000 passengers a year, with only three deaths
over a 10-year period.

SURGEONS WORK TO SAVE HUMAN FROM DEAD BODY

Pneumonia Fatal to One of Siamese Twins as Other Enjoys Good Health

LIFE IS IN DANGER

Difference of Circulatory Systems May Benefit

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 (UP). — In the glaring white, intensely silent operating room of York hospital early today a surgeon, assisted by four doctors, separated a dead human body from a living one. They had been joined by a band of cartilage at the base of the spine since birth — for 28 years.

The operation was imperative and no one knew it more than Simplicio Godino whose black eyes rolled in fright in his white face as he was wheeled under the operating lights.

On the stretcher hip to hip, shoulder to shoulder, joined by a cord the diameter of a doubled fist, as nature had ordained that they should live, was the inert body of his Siamese twin, Lucio, whose eyes were closed in death.

Other Dies, Too

Lucio slipped into the borderland at 6 p. m., yesterday and at 11:40 p. m. succumbed to lobar pneumonia. For ten days the well Simplicio had been an involuntary patient, fretting, bored, wishing for his brother's recovery. But last night while his brother was dying he had hours to think of the proven inseparability of Siamese twins. If one dies, the other dies too has been the unvarying experience of medicine.

As Lucio drew his last agonized breath, nurses prepared the operating room. Forty minutes later the living body and the dead body were lifted onto the stretcher and wheeled through the corridor under the bright light.

While the surgeon and his four assistants worked, the sisters, Natividad and Victorina, their wives, waited in another room, unaware that Lucio had died. After it was over Natividad was informed that she was a widow.

Doctors believed there was an excellent chance for Simplicio to survive. He and his brother differed from all previous Siamese twins in that they did not share one circulatory system, a condition which in the past has made severance operations impossible.

Years ago doctors had advised the brothers that they might be separated at small risk, but they had refused because severance would ruin them as vaudeville exhibits. Simplicio's condition early today was "favorable," but it was said to be too early to forecast the outcome.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Thursday and Friday

With one of the most gripping climaxes of any recent screen offering—when the stewardess of a big transport plane lost in a storm has to bring the ship down by herself after the pilot has half-killed the co-pilot and jumped out in a parachute—RKO Radio's "Without Orders" brings plenty of thrills to film-goers.

Robert Armstrong, Sally Eilers and Vinton "Lawford" form the romantic triangle in this drama of modern aviation. Frances Sage and Charles Grapewin are co-featured with them in a big cast including Arthur Loft, Frank M. Thomas and Ward Bond. Taken from a story by Peter B. Kyne, the film blends romance with its exciting action.

"Mr. Cinderella" starring Jack Haley and Betty Furness promises the other half of this outstanding double bill.

AT THE CIRCLE

Among the large cast in "It Couldn't Have Happened" Invincible's melodramatic comedy at the Circle Theatre, Wednesday is a newcomer to the screen who will bear watching. His name is John Marlowe, and Maury M. Cohen, producer of Invincible pictures, is so impressed with Marlowe's potentialities that he has signed this young actor to a four-year contract. "It Couldn't Have Happened" is Marlowe's second picture. He made his screen debut in an adaptation of Ursula Parrott's "Brilliant Marriage," which was also produced by Invincible.

AT THE GRAND

Lawrence Tibbett, famous baritone singer, is scheduled for appearances at the Grand theatre Wednesday and Thursday in "Under Your Spell." He is aided by Wendy Barrie, Gregory Ratoff, and Arthur Treacher.

A Real Love Story--- ROOSEVELT-DU PONT ROMANCE

---As Told by Happy Couple to Writer

This is the second of three articles on the Roosevelt-du Pont romance.

By JUDITH FIELD

Central Press Correspondent

GREENVILLE, Del., Nov. —

"A quiet church wedding."

That typifies Ethel du Pont, fiancée of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. She could have a White House wedding.

This girl, who has "everything," nevertheless is retiring and charming.

Blonde and slender, Ethel's smile and husky, low voice is teasingly reminiscent of Joan Bennett of the movies.

If Ethel were a talkative soul, she could dilate on this: First, that platinum set engagement ring, presented her by Franklin, Jr., on one of his frequent week-end trips to the Eugene du Pont estate on Owl's Nest road, with the diamonds three times as many and three times as large as the usual betrothal rings; secondly, the distinction of having the president's son for a boy friend, and thirdly, the privilege, even though it is undesired in her case, of having her marriage performed in the mansion of the chief executive of the nation. And, of course, the further attributes of wealth, youth and beauty are pleasant, too, in her way.

Ethel's Antecedents

Indeed, the 20-year-old Ethel who suddenly burst into the limelight as a very important young lady, has everyone guessing. Before the announcement of the engagement which will link the president's family with that of the most influential members of the opposition party, she was more or less known only as a sister of Miss Almée du Pont and Nicholas R. du Pont of Greenville and of Eugene du Pont III of Richmond, Va., a daughter to Eugene du Pont—named in 1930 by the late Ambassador James W. Gerard as one of the 6 men "who rule the United States"—and the former Ethel Pyle, one of the most famous society beauties of her day; and a niece or cousin to the heretofore, more spectacular wealthy du Ponts of Delaware.

To the du Pont-conscious inhabitants of Wilmington, Ethel was regarded as a somewhat shy, gawky schoolgirl. Before graduating from the Ethel Walker school at Simsbury Conn., in 1934, she had attended Mrs. Hebb's school in Wilmington. She lived a casual, quiet life, though she often was seen at horse shows, winning prizes for superior horsemanship. Her swimming is excellent, too, and, at one time she took flying instructions at the private du Pont flying field—although she wasn't particularly interested in following the example of her cousin, the former Alice du Pont (now Mrs. James Paul Mill) who became an accomplished pilot.

Ethel would come into Wilmington on occasional evenings to enjoy the lobster specialties in the restaurant of a small hotel there.

Within Herself

Never attracting undue attention, she was one of those girls who kept within themselves. As a matter of fact, one of her first cousins once remarked that he, her of the freshman crew and rowed on the junior varsity in his sophomore and junior years. Wishing to try out for football at the beginning of his college career, he soon gave up the idea and turned in his uniform because cameramen were always following him around and interfered with the practice. He is a member of the Fly and Iroquois clubs and Hasty Pudding Institute of 1970, and, recently, he was raised to a third degree of Masonry.

Coming from families with opposing party beliefs and, though of opposite personalities themselves, the du Pont girl and young Roosevelt have grown to complement each other perfectly.

Three-Year Courtship

Making frequent visits to the Walker school in 1933, and a guest at Ethel's 1934 debut, Franklin also has been seen lately escorting her to the Harvard football games. Then, too, he once purchased a roadster giving Owl's Nest road as his address.

During a joint interview recently, the newly engaged couple were in complete and comforting accord. Each was eager for the other to hear "what I have to say."

Though poised and contained, Miss du Pont was obviously disturbed when Franklin, jovially conversing with photographers, would happen to walk a few steps away leaving her, an unwilling conversant, in the hands of a reporter.

"I really can't say any more," she objected, mildly glancing across the room to where Roosevelt, Jr., was standing. "We want to keep away from the public. We, we," she stuttered slightly, catching his eye—"want to keep things from the public."

In response to the observation that such a procedure would be

knew most of his friends better than he knew her.

Then, during her senior year at Mrs. Walker's school, this rather retiring girl met Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Jr., who was a freshman at Harvard. A grand nephew of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, grandson of Mrs. James Roosevelt, great-grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Warren Delano, as well as being grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Roosevelt and great-grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Valentine G. Hall, and, of course, son of the president of the United States, young Franklin had a lot of Roosevelt blood in him to live up to.

But, being no introvert, he has managed to do all right for himself. At Harvard he was a member of the Phi Kappa Psi chapter.

STATE TO VIEW BALLOTS CAST IN COUNTY RACE

Lawrence County Contest Results in Action by Secretary

COMMISSIONER IN DOUBT

Disparity in Results in 26 Precincts Studied

COLUMBUS, Nov. 25—(UP)—Secretary of State George S. Myers today had ordered the impounding of ballots cast in the Lawrence county commissioner's race in the November election.

The ballots will be held pending further instructions from Myers.

Myers said he ordered the county board of elections to impound the ballots after information was laid before him indicating that there had been a marked disparity in results in 26 precincts in the race for county commissioner between the official count and a subsequent recount.

Myers said that on the official count Banton, Democratic candidate, led his opponent by 300 votes while the recount showed Dickens, his Republican opponent in the lead by approximately 150 votes.

The Democratic candidate, Myers said he was informed, plans to contest the election in court and as a result the state election official ordered ballots, stubs and records of the contest impounded.

BOULAY TO 'TRY' TO HELP COUNTY P. W. A. PROJECT

L. A. Boulay, state director of PWA, notified Forrest Short, county auditor, Wednesday morning, an attempt will be made by the state department to obtain the 30-day extension on opening the courthouse project.

Mr. Boulay's letter to Mr. Short follows: "We have received and reviewed your request for an extension of time for commencing construction on the above project. Due to the unusual conditions surrounding your project, we will attempt to have the time for commencing construction extended to Feb. 11. However, in the meantime, we suggest that you instruct your architect to proceed with the plans as rapidly as possible."

Commissioners asked state officials for a 30-day time extension for starting the project so they would have more time to complete plans and details. Under terms of the $23,198 grant from PWA for the addition, work was to be started by Jan. 11. Complete plans are now being prepared by the architect.

The request for the extension explained the addition joined with the old courthouse building and there were several connections to be worked out that would require more time than if the building were entirely separate.

SURGEONS WORK TO SAVE HUMAN FROM DEAD BODY

Pneumonia Fatal to One of Siamese Twins as Other Enjoys Good Health

LIFE IS IN DANGER

Difference of Circulatory Systems May Benefit

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 — (UP) — In the glaring white, intensely silent operating room of York hospital early today a surgeon, assisted by four doctors, separated a dead human body from a living one. They had been joined by a band of cartilage at the base of the spine since birth — for 28 years.

The operation was imperative and no one knew it more than Simplicio Godino whose black eyes rolled in fright in his white face as he was wheeled under the operating lights.

On the stretcher hip to hip, shoulder to shoulder, joined by a cord the diameter of a doubled fist, as nature had ordained that they should live, was the inert body of his Siamese twin, Lucio, whose eyes were closed in death.

Other Dies, Too
Lucio slipped into the borderland at 6 p. m., yesterday and at 11:40 p. m. succumbed to lobar pneumonia. For ten days the well Simplicio had been an involuntary patient, fretting, bored, wishing for his brother's recovery. But last night while his brother was dying he had hours to think of the proven inseparability of Siamese twins. If one dies, the other dies too has been the unvarying experience of medicine.

As Lucio drew his last agonized breath, nurses prepared the operating room. Forty minutes later the living body and the dead body were lifted onto the stretcher and wheeled through the corridor under the bright light.

While the surgeon and his four assistants worked, the sisters, Natividad and Victoria, their wives, waited in another room, unaware that Lucio had died. After it was over Natividad was informed that she was a widow.

Doctors believed there was an excellent chance for Simplicio to survive. He and his brother differed from all previous Siamese twins in that they did not share one circulatory system, a condition which in the past has made severance operations impossible.

Years ago doctors had advised the brothers that they might be separated at small risk, but they had refused because severance would ruin them as vaudeville exhibits. Simplicio's condition early today was "favorable," but it was said to be too early to forecast the outcome.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA Thursday and Friday

With one of the most gripping cliffhangers of any recent screen offering—when the stewardess of a big transport plane lost in a storm has to bring the ship down by herself after the pilot has half-killed the co-pilot and jumped out in a parachute—RKO Radio's "Without Orders" brings plenty of thrills to film-goers.

Robert Armstrong, Sally Eilers and Vinton J. Howard form the romantic triangle in this drama of modern aviation. Frances Sage and Charles Grapewin are co-featured with them in a big cast including Arthur Loft, Frank M. Thomas and Ward Bond. Taken from a story by Peter B. Kyne, the film blends romance with its exciting action.

"Mr. Cinderella" starring Jack Haley and Betty Furness comprises the other half of this outstanding double bill!

AT THE CIRCLE

Among the large cast in "It Couldn't Have Happened," Invincible's melodramatic comedy at the Circle Theatre, Wednesday is a newcomer to the screen who will bear watching. His name is John Marlowe, and Maury M. Cohen, producer of Invincible pictures, is so impressed with Marlowe's potentialities that he has signed this young actor to a four-year contract. "It Couldn't Have Happened" is Marlowe's second picture. He made his screen debut in an adaptation of Ursula Parrott's "Brilliant Marriage," which was also produced by Invincible.

AT THE GRAND

Lawrence Tibbett, famous baritone singer, is scheduled for appearances at the Grand theatre Wednesday and Thursday in "Under Your Spell." He is aided by Wendy Barrie, Gregory Ratoff, and Arthur Treacher.

A Real Love Story---

ROOSEVELT-DU PONT ROMANCE

---As Told by Happy Couple to Writer

This is the second of three articles on the Roosevelt-du Pont romance.

By JUDITH FIELD

Central Press Correspondent GREENVILLE, Del., Nov. — "A quiet church wedding."

That typifies Ethel du Pont, fiancée of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. She could have a White House wedding.

This girl, who has "everything," nevertheless is retiring and charming.

Blonde and slender, Ethel's smile and husky, low voice is teasingly reminiscent of Joan Bennett of the movies.

If Ethel were a talkative soul, she could dilate on this: First, that platinum set engagement ring, presented her by Franklin, Jr., on one of his frequent week-end trips to the Eugene du Pont estate on Owl's Nest road, with the diamonds three times as many and three times as large as the usual betrothal rings; secondly, the distinction of having the president's son for a boy friend, and thirdly, the privilege, even though it is undesired in her case, of having her marriage performed in the mansion of the chief executive of the nation. And, of course, the further attributes of wealth, youth and beauty are pleasant, too, in their way.

Ethel's Antecedents

Indeed, the 20-year-old Ethel who suddenly burst into the limelight as a very important young lady, has everyone guessing. Before the announcement of the engagement which will link the president's family with that of the most influential members of the opposition party, she was more or less known only as: a sister of Miss Almée du Pont and Nicholas R. du Pont of Greenville and of Eugene du Pont III of Richmond, Va., a daughter to Eugene du Pont—named in 1930 by the late Ambassador James W. Gerard as one of the 6 men "who rule the United States"—and the former Ethel Pyle, one of the most famous society beauties of her day; and a niece or cousin to the, heretofore, more spectacular wealthy du Ponts of Delaware.

To the du Pont-conscious inhabitants of Wilmington, Ethel was regarded as a somewhat shy gawky schoolgirl. Before graduating from the Ethel Walker school at Simsbury Conn., in 1934, she had attended Mrs. Hebb's school in Wilmington. She lived a casual, quiet life, though she often was seen at horse shows, winning prizes for superior horsemanship. Her swimming is excellent, too, and, at one time she took flying instructions at the private du Pont flying field—although she wasn't particularly interested in following the example of her cousin, the former Alice du Pont (now Mrs. James Paul Mill) who became an accomplished pilot.

Ethel would come into Wilmington on occasional evenings to enjoy the lobster specialties in the restaurant of a small hotel there.

Within Herself

Never attracting undue attention, she was one of those girls who kept within themselves. As a matter of fact, one of her first cousins once remarked that he ber of the freshman crew and rowed on the junior varsity in his sophomore and junior years. Wishing to try out for football at the beginning of his college career, he soon gave up the idea and turned in his uniform because cameramen were always following him around and interfered with the practice. He is a member of the Fly and Iroquois clubs and Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770, and, recently, he was raised to a third degree of Masonry.

Coming from families with opposing party beliefs and, though of opposite personalities themselves, the du Pont girl and young Roosevelt have grown to complement each other perfectly.

Three-Year Courtship

Making frequent visits to the Walker school in 1933, and a guest at Ethel's 1934 debut, Franklin also has been seen lately escorting her to the Harvard football games. Then, too, he once purchased a roadster giving Owl's Nest road as his address.

During a joint interview recently, the newly engaged couple were in complete and comforting accord. Each was eager for the other to hear "what I have to say."

Though poised and contained, Miss du Pont was obviously disturbed when Franklin, jovially conversing with photographers, would happen to walk a few steps away—leaving her, an unwilling conversant, in the hands of a reporter.

"I really can't say any more," she objected, mildly glancing across the room to where Roosevelt, Jr., was standing. "We want to keep away from the public. We, we," she stuttered slightly, catching his eye—"want to keep things from the public."

In response to the observation that such a procedure would be

knew most of his friends better than he knew her.

Then, during her senior year at Mrs. Walker's school, this rather retiring girl met Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Jr., who was a freshman at Harvard. A grand nephew of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, grandson of Mrs. James Roosevelt, great-grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Warren Delano; as well as being grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Roosevelt and great-grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Valentine G. Hall, and, of course, son of the president of the United States, young Franklin had a lot of Roosevelt blood in him to live up to.

But, being no introvert, he has managed to do all right for himself. At Harvard he was a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, on one of his frequent week-end trips to the Eugene du Pont estate on Owl's Nest road, with the diamonds three times as many and three times as large as the usual betrothal rings; secondly, the distinction of having the president's son for a boy friend, and thirdly, the privilege, even though it is undesired in her case, of having her marriage performed in the mansion of the chief executive of the nation. And, of course, the further attributes of wealth, youth and beauty are pleasant, too, in their way.

In response to the observation that such a procedure would be practically impossible, the president's son chuckled indulgently at the rather embarrassed daughter of the du Ponts and agreed: "You're right, we can't keep it from the public."

But he reproved laughingly: "Now, oh now," when a reporter began secretly engaged prior to their public announcement.

Though charmingly obedient to the various directions of the cameramen who dominated the proceedings, Miss du Pont seemed to find things a trifle disconcerting. Half to herself she remarked: "I hope this will all be over soon."

Plans Are Vague

Both Miss du Pont and young Roosevelt professed ignorance of any of the usual bridal plans.

He grinned: "I don't know what we are going to do after we get married. Maybe we'll travel. Maybe I'll go into law. Maybe I'll go to business school. But it won't be politics. Of that I'm certain."

The two young people are both Episcopalians, so the quiet church spoken of by the bride-to-be is expected to be Christ Episcopal church, Christian Hundred (a section about four miles from Wilmington. This church was founded in 1884 and has been the scene of many important events in the lives of the du Pont families from marriages to births to burials.

"She is a very sweet girl," observed Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt when, stopping off in Wichita, Kas., on a lecture tour, she was informed that the engagement of her son and the du Pont heiress had been publicly announced.

Also, regarding young Roosevelt, Eugene du Pont, father of Ethel, is said to have remarked: "He is a pretty good guy."

Thus, smooth sailing ahead for the two seems to be indicated after their prospective June nuptials.

U.S. RESIDENTS OF MADRID PACK FOR LONG TRIP

Embassy Attaches, Nationals to Eat Thanksgiving Dinner From Boxes

REBELS LOSING GROUND

Moorish Prisoners Tell of Diminishing Number

MADRID, Nov. 25 — (UP) — American embassy attaches, and American women and children refugees, packed their belongings today and prepared to spend Thanksgiving Day on a 200-mile drive to the coast.

They will eat their Thanksgiving dinner from boxes on the road to Valencia, to embark in the cruiser Raleigh late tomorrow for Marseilles, France.

Some 45 to 50 refugees, nearly all women and children, were expected to make up the party while most of the men remain, living at the embassy which will be in charge of an unofficial caretaker.

May Defeat Rebels
As the refugees packed today, sources close to the government began to predict privately, for the first time since the siege began, that the nationalists are going to beat off the nationalist attack.

They have repelled attack after attack in the last few days, and this morning, dawning cold and gray, found loyalist troops nearly surrounding the nationalists in some positions—notably between 500 and 600 in University City, in the northwest suburbs, and 2,000 in the Casa De Campo.

Prisoners taken in the University City fighting, it was asserted, included Moors only 16 years old who told their captors that the nationalist forces were decreasing steadily in number in the fighting.

The Italian and German embassies, seized by the government because Italy and Germany recognized the nationalists, were under heavy machine gun guard after their forced evacuation. Police insisted that in the German embassy they found three boxes of hand grenades and a supply of rifles, revolvers and machine guns.

Charge D'Affaires Eric C. Wendell organized the work of assembling the American refugees who elected to go to the coast. He was aided by Col. Stephen O. Fugate, military attaché; John D. Johnson, consul, and Boland More, vice consul.

All night the refugees collected their trunks and furniture.
"It will be the strangest Thanksgiving I ever spent," said Miss Virginia McKay, of Colorado Springs, a resident for 18 months and now one of the refugees. "But maybe it will lead to a real one hereafter."

King Edward's Possible Marriage Causes Archbishop of Canterbury To Ponder His Part in Ceremony

NEW YORK — If King Edward weds Wallis Simpson, will the ceremony be performed by silver-haired, 73-year-old Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, His Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England and Metropolitan?

The archbishop is very independent minded, and there have been rumors that he has disapproved of such a union.

The archbishop, who does not agree with others' opinion on many subjects, has an interesting background, as has the high clerical office which he fills.

Four centuries ago King Henry VIII expelled the Catholic church, divided his protestant kingdom into two dioceses, the archbishopric of York for the north of England; the archbishopric of Canterbury, containing London, the capital, became the more important.

And down the centuries, always His Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury, has officiated at all state occasions, such as the births, marriages, coronations and deaths of Britain's monarchs. It is a mighty office, an honored one, and its holder, behind him the century-old tradition of loyalty and religious faith, wields influence in England second only to that of the throne.

Archbishop Lang is an astute diplomat, well versed in palace corridor strategy. A sagacious, energetic, acid-tongued churchman, the archbishop has been certain of his own destiny since 26, when, on the eve of being called to the bar, instead he suddenly turned to take up holy orders, shocked by poverty he had seen in London's notorious East End.

Dr. Lang's Great Moment
Given a pulpit in Leeds, northern England industrial town, Dr. Lang remained three years, then went to Oxford university to become an instructor. His great moment came, when transferred to the famous shipping town of Portsea, directly across from the Isle of Wight, where Queen Victoria vacationed in summer, the young clergyman's Sunday sermons earned him praise from Her Majesty.

Upon her return to London, this blue-eyed, eloquent, handsome priest became one of her court chaplains. He remained one of her favorites. During his long days, he helped establish boys' clubs, believing that sports were a great bar to adolescent mischief, earned a great reputation as a preacher by his Sunday sermons, though his logic and intelligence kept large feminine audiences from him.

When Queen Victoria suggested he dismiss two of his curates from his bachelor residence and marry instead, witty Dr. Lang rejoined, "Your majesty, I can always dismiss a curate, but never a wife."

Small wonder that his charm soon was recognized. When the office of Bishop of Stepney was vacant, Dr. Lang, at 37, was appointed. When a few months later, he spurned an offer to become Archbishop of Montreal, gossips said the young churchman had his eyes on the Archbishopric of York, England's second highest protestant post. They were correct. And at 44, aided by his great friends — Queen Victoria's son, King Edward VII, and Prime Minister Asquith — Lang received the coveted York post.

Ascends to Archbishopric

His ascension to the Archbishopric of Canterbury came a few years later, partly by accident. His predecessor, the 80-year-old, gentle Dr. Davidson, twice rebuffed by parliament over the publication of the English prayerbook, resigned. It was the first resignation from the Canterbury post in the history of the church, and within a fortnight Dr. Lang became the new archbishop.

His installation in pomp and pageantry ranks just below that of his king. Awakened in Lambeth palace, traditional residence of England's primate, to the clamor of cathedral bells, the archbishop-elect attends holy communion in Westminster Abbey, is dressed in rich robes, and falls in line behind the highest dignitaries of the state at the west doorway. A priest bears his train.

Then finally he is led into a chapel and seated in the ancient, marble chair of St. Augustine, and reads a service in Latin. Taking up the Episcopal cross in his left hand, the archbishop-elect raises his right hand and pronounces prayers. In that instant he becomes the new Archbishop of Canterbury.

Dr. Lang's appointment aroused criticism that he was too conservative. Soon he solved the prayer book squabble, and down the years his acid wit and observation have earned him a reputation of almost being ahead of the times. Occasionally from the pulpit, often from his peer's seat in the house of lords, His Grace, Cosmo Cantuaris (his official church name), has thundered against social evils, or clamored for enactment of ideals he holds dear.

Advocates Irish Control

At a bishops' conference in his residence several years ago, he said, "Speaking for myself, I believe we have almost ignored the fact that there has been a revolution in the customs of married life. I believe that some form of birth control should be permitted."

A bitter enemy of Nazi persecution of the Jews, the archbishop now has moderated his tone. He has demanded, indeed, that the world recognize that Germany has a new and, perhaps, permanent set of rulers. A great friend of J. P. Morgan, the American banker, the archbishop frequently sails aboard the latter's yacht, Corsair.

In recent years, the archbishop has become "more human". Recently he scolded his clergymen for preaching dull sermons and predicted churches would soon be empty unless such dullness were banished from Sunday meetings.

Close to King George

A bosom friend of the late King George, Canterbury held the hand of the dying monarch, and it was he who informed Edward, standing by, that he was the new king. Of the latter, the archbishop once spoke proudly, "The Prince of Wales has brought to all classes

The archbishop is considered, nevertheless, to be a leader among the British conservatives who believe King Edward is "too liberal" in his views and actions.

What the archbishop thinks now, may be inferred, say London observers, by his absence from a recent royal party at which Mrs. Simpson was an honored guest. Pillar of the church, esteemed friend and comforter of Queen Mary, the king's mother, Cosmo Cantuaris so far has been stiffly silent concerning Edward's supposed plans.

Unnamed Man Missing

Captain James Rice, general manager here for the Moore and McCormack lines which owned the 7600-ton vessel, said two unnamed employees were missing. Capt. J. R. Hodges, master of the Scantic, said all of his crew were safe and accounted for.

About 75 men were aboard the Scantic yesterday and thirty of them working below decks, insulating the No. 2 hold for refrigerator equipment.

Flames and dense smoke broke out, roaring from open hatches almost without warning. The fire may have been started by hot rivets falling into cotton waste and tar.

Men shouted and ran for ladders. Metal rungs burned their hands and sent them tumbling back to the decks, where fire ignited their clothes again and sent them for the ladders once more.

Those who escaped thought six or seven men down near the double bottom of the ship had no chance. They were cut off from exits, and their ladders burned. Injured men said the hold became an inferno quickly, and asserted that if the flames did not kill their missing companions, the heavy smoke and live steam did.

Three men fought their way up through the flames.

U.S. RESIDENTS OF MADRID PACK FOR LONG TRIP

Embassy Attaches, Nationals to Eat Thanksgiving Dinner From Boxes

REBELS LOSING GROUND

Moorish Prisoners Tell of Diminishing Number

MADRID, Nov. 25 — (UP) — American embassy attaches, and American women and children refugees, packed their belongings today and prepared to spend Thanksgiving Day on a 200-mile drive to the coast.

They will eat their Thanksgiving dinner from boxes on the road to Valencia, to embark in the cruiser Raleigh late tomorrow for Mar-seilles, France.

Some 45 to 50 refugees, nearly all women and children, were expected to make up the party while most of the men remain, living in the embassy which will be in charge of an unofficial caretaker.

May Defeat Rebels

As the refugees packed today, sources close to the government began to predict privately, for the first time since the siege began, that the loyalists are going to beat off the nationalist attack.

They have repelled attack after attack in the last few days, and this morning, dawning cold and gray, found loyalist troops nearly surrounding the nationalists in some positions—notably between 500 and 600 in University City, in the northwest suburbs, and 2,000 in the Casa De Campa.

Prisoners taken in the University City fighting, it was asserted, included Moors only 16 years old who told their captors that the nationalist forces were decreasing steadily in number in the fighting.

The Italian and German embassies, seized by the government because Italy and Germany recognized the nationalists, were under heavy machine gun guard after their forced evacuation. Police insisted that in the German embassy they found three boxes of hand grenades and a supply of rifles, revolvers and machine guns.

Charge D'Affaires Eric C. Wendelin organized the work of assembling the American refugees who elected to go to the coast. He was aided by Col. Stephen O. Fiquera, military attaché; John D. Johnson, consul, and Bolard More, vice consul.

All night the refugees collected their trunks and furniture.

"It will be the strangest Thanksgiving I ever spent," said Miss Virginia McKay, of Colorado Springs, a resident for 18 months and now one of the refugees. "But maybe it will lead to a real one hereafter."

NEW YORK — If King Edward weds Wallis Simpson, will the ceremony be performed by silver-haired, 73-year-old Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, His Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England and Metropolitan?

The archbishop is very independent minded, and there have been rumors that he has disapproved of such a union.

The archbishop, who does not agree with others' opinion on many subjects, has an interesting background, as has the high clerical office which he fills.

Four centuries ago King Henry VIII expelled the Catholic church, divided his protestant kingdom into two dioceses, the archbishopric of York for the north of England; the archbishopric of Canterbury, containing London, the capital, became the more important.

And down the centuries, always His Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury, has officiated at all state occasions, such as the births, marriages, coronations and deaths of Britain's monarchs. It is a mighty office, an honored one, and its holder, behind him the century-old tradition of loyalty and religious faith, yields influence in England second only to that of the throne.

Archbishop Lang is an astute diplomat, well versed in palace corridor strategy. A sagacious, energetic, acid-tongued churchman, the archbishop has been certain of his own destiny since 26, when, on the eve of being called to the bar, instead he suddenly turned to take up holy orders, shocked by poverty he had seen in London's notorious East End.

Dr. Lang's Great Moment Given a pulpit in Leeds, northern England industrial town, Dr. Lang remained three years, then went to Oxford university to become an instructor. His great moment came, when transferred to the famous shipping town of Portsea, directly across from the Isle of Wight, where Queen Victoria vacationed in summer, the young clergyman's Sunday sermons earned him praise from Her Majesty.

Upon her return to London, this blue-eyed, eloquent, handsome priest became one of her court chaplains. He remained one of her favorites. During his long days, he helped establish boys' clubs, believing that sports were a great bar to adolescent mischief, earned a great reputation as a preacher by his Sunday sermons, though his logic and intelligence kept large feminine audiences from him.

When Queen Victoria suggested he dismiss two of his curates from his bachelor residence and marry instead, witty Dr. Lang rejoined, "Your majesty, I can always dismiss a curate, but never a wife."

Small wonder that his charm soon was recognized. When the office of Bishop of Stepney was vacant, Dr. Lang, at 37, was appointed. When a few months later, he spurned an offer to become Archbishop of Montreal, gossips said the young churchman had his eyes on the Archbishopric of York, England's second highest protestant post. They were correct. And at 44, aided by his great friends — Queen Victoria's son, King Edward VII, and Prime Minister Asquith — Lang received the coveted York post.

Ascends to Archbishopric

His ascension to the Archbishopric of Canterbury came a few years later, partly by accident. His predecessor, the 80-year-old, gentle Dr. Davidson, twice rebuffed by parliament over the publication of the English prayerbook, resigned. It was the first resignation from the Canterbury post in the history of the church, and within a fortnight Dr. Lang became the new archbishop.

His installation in pomp and pageantry ranks just below that of his king. Awakened in Lambeth palace, traditional residence of England's primate, to the clamor of cathedral bells, the archbishop-elect attends holy communion in Westminster Abbey, is dressed in rich robes, and falls in line behind the highest dignitaries of the state at the west doorway. A priest bears his train.

Then finally he is led into a chapel and seated in the ancient, marble chair of St. Augustine, and reads a service in Latin. Taking up the Episcopal cross in his left hand, the archbishop-elect raises his right hand and pronounces prayers. In that instant he becomes the new Archbishop of Canterbury.

Dr. Lang's appointment aroused criticism that he was too conservative. Soon he solved the prayer book squabble, and down the years his acid wit and observation have earned him a reputation of almost being ahead of the times. Occasionally from the pulpit, often from his peer's seat in the house of lords, His Grace, Cosmo Cantuarus (his official church name), has thundered against social evils, or clamored for enactment of ideals he holds dear.

Advocates Birth Control At a bishops' conference in his residence several years ago, he said, "Speaking for myself, I believe we have almost ignored the fact that there has been a revolution in the customs of married life. I believe that some form of birth control should be permitted."

A bitter enemy of Nazi persecution of the Jews, the archbishop now has moderated his tone. He has demanded, indeed, that the world recognize that Germany has a new and, perhaps, permanent set of rulers. A great friend of J. P. Morgan, the American banker, the archbishop frequently sails aboard the latter's yacht, Corsair.

In recent years, the archbishop has become "more human". Recently he scolded his clergymen for preaching dull sermons and predicted churches would soon be empty unless such dullness were banished from Sunday meetings.

CHEAP DOMESTIC "JUICE"
ACCORDING to an official of the General Electric Company, electric power output this year will be 19.4 per cent above the 1929 figure, and domestic use will be 85 per cent higher than the 1929 level. This favorable status of home consumption of current reflects widened demand for power — consuming apparatus but in any scientific research for the relationship of cause to effect the cost factor will have to be given due weight.

Federal statistics record that the nationwide average price for electricity for domestic use was 8.1 cents per kilowatt hour, thirty years ago, and that in 1933 it was 6.1 cents. That is only half the story, or less. These are national averages of local highs and lows. Domestic consumption has been increased largely by developing the use of electricity for service other than lighting, and this extended use has been won by offering the inducement of a lower rate for higher volume of current consumption.

Corporation management has found profit in making current cheaper, and in so doing has built up a type of patronage better able than commercial service to stand up under the strain of depression years. The domestic consumer, whose patronage continues to grow, has been a life-saver to the power purveyors in their time of trouble.

INDUSTRY IN THE VANGUARD
AT last, after years of conflicting views and of antagonistic relations, business and the National Administration seem to be approaching a spirit of accord and co-operation that promises well for the future of the country. Apparently there is to be a truce and the drive for a final and complete solution of the unemployment problem is to be pressed by a united front.

Heartening assurance that the need of governmental stimulation of reemployment will soon cease to exist comes from Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Mr. Sibley says that with one or two good years, business will remove the depression's legacy of unemployment.

With industry in the vanguard and its spirit of the high order indicated by Mr. Sibley, there should be no abatement of the present progress.

JOHN D. M. HAMILTON, national Republican chairman, plans to have a large office in Washington to keep the G.O.P. in touch with national affairs. The Chicago headquarters will also be retained.

But — whether Mr. Hamilton knows it or not — he will have little control over the few remaining G. O. P. members in congress, or over the Big Money men of New York. They already are looking around for a good organizer.

In envy they look upon Mr. Roosevelt's Jim Farley. No such political organizer has been seen since the days of Mark Hanna, the iron ore and shipping baron of Cleveland who became president-maker.

AN IDEAL?
Yet, Jim Farley would be the first to confide that it was not he that won — but the ideals of President Roosevelt.

Jim, who is one of the best liked by newsmen of any man in politics, may have a knack for organizing, but he also has something better — insight.

It was this insight, some years ago, that caused him to tie his wagon to the Roosevelt star. (Al Smith can't understand that to this day.)

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

SHOULD NEW DEAL COMPROMISE

WASHINGTON — The old powder keg, the power issue, is sizzling within the New Deal again, and may break out into the open at any moment.

This time it is not going to be a Congressional fight like the Holding Corporation Bill row, but a war involving such important projects as the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Chief issue at stake is whether the New Deal should compromise with the power companies.

Liberals inside the Administration say Roosevelt's overwhelming election is a passport to the President to push the power fight to the limit. They want no compromise.

Pseudo-liberals and conservatives say the President should now work out a system whereby the Government and private power companies can cooperate. They propose the British "grid" system, or power pool, by which the generating and transmitting equipment of both public and private plants is consolidated into a single network, operated by a joint board on which the public and the private power companies are both represented.

Object of the Grid System is to eliminate costly competition between private and public projects.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

A weird cast of characters is taking part in this controversy. Those advocating the Grid System or Power Pool are:

LOUIS BRANDEIS WEHLE, nephew of Justice Brandeis, and a Harvard classmate of the President's now a New York lawyer for Prudential Life and other firms with investments in power companies.

ALEXANDER SACHS, rotund, genial economist for the Lehman Corp., banking firm; also General Johnson's first economic adviser in NRA.

BASIL MANLY, pseudo-liberal vice-chairman of the Federal Power Commission.

DR. ARTHUR E. MORGAN, crotchety, hard-working chairman of TVA. Chief opponents to the Power Pool are:

DAVID E. LILIENTHAL, crusading director of TVA.

J. D. ROSS, idealistic member of the Securities-Exchange Commission, and former superintendent of the Seattle power system, largest and most successful municipal plant in the country.

RENEWED FIGHT

But just as he sailed for South America, the issue cropped up again.

It arose as a result of increasing friction between Dave Lilienthal and A. E. Morgan, both executives of TVA. The two men have been getting on each other's nerves. Last spring Morgan served notice on the White House that if Lilienthal were reappointed (his term was up in June), he, Morgan, would resign.

Roosevelt serenely reappointed Lilienthal. Morgan did not resign. Now it begins to look as if the President hoped that he would. In fact, when the President returns, Morgan's retirement would not surprise inner White House advisers.

NOT SO SIMPLE

Of course, it isn't so simple as that.

One has to organize down to the very last election district in the entire nation. Imagine the feelings of a Farley when a shift of a few thousand votes in Maine and Vermont would have given President Roosevelt all 48 states! Jim took that as a defeat, as a mar to the record. If only the president had gone there, if only a little more effort had been made —

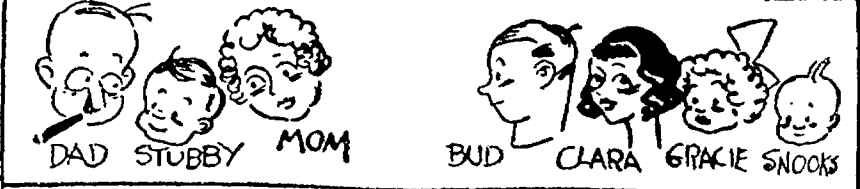

The Republicans had no one to compete with Jim. The true organizer doesn't flit around much, doesn't make any speeches. It is more important to be the nerve center in a general headquarters, to be the silent, all-powerful, always alert general.

Farley had done his flitting prior to the nominations. At that, it wasn't even "flitting". Farley traveled 45,000 miles, going over the details to the last dot on arrangements. By June, he had completed these arrangements. The other side had not even begun. Hamilton wasn't even chairman yet.

Folk Benefitted from Vacations in Winter

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
IN MOST parts of the United States a summer vacation is the one that is a real necessity. With such a summer as we had last year over most of the working area of the country, starting us in the face as a possibility for the future, if a person has only one vacation a year he certainly will place it so that he can get relief from that scorching heat.

Dr. Clendingen

Winter vacations are distinctly in the luxury class for most of us, but for a few classes of people they approach the necessary.

First of these, are the oldish people from the age of 65 on. Those who are on the way to old age and those who have accomplished it. Although pneumonia has been called the old man's friend by Dr. Osier, because it puts them out of their troubles, most of us, as Dr. W. A. Evans used to say, are willing to avoid that kind of friend, or postpone an introduction as long as possible. And certainly there is a relationship between winter weather and pneumonia and bronchitis. To be in a southern climate is to help avoid meeting this friend.

As time goes on we are more and more sensitive to cold. Sunshine and mild outdoor weather are great boons to the elderly, especially saving them the confinement and dangers of our artificially warmed houses.

Sinus Sufferers Helped

Another group that are saved from such misery and actual danger by going on winter vacations are the sinus sufferers and chronic bronchitis victims. There is no question that they do better in a warm, sunny and especially dry climate.

Sinus infections occur in highly vascular and spongy tissues that swell and ebb to the influence of temperature and humidity, and the change from our dry artificial heated houses to the damp outdoors cold in the winter time makes them do a dance that dams up secretions and is bound to have a bad effect.

Then there are people who have a residuum of a chronic bronchitis, which lights up at the approach of winter. They begin by having one cold after another, and then the interval between them gets shorter, until they have a cold all the time, and about March they have to take to bed for a while and don't really get back into shape until mid-June. For them the winter vacation spot is truly life saving. Or at least, health saving. It is a sound financial investment. Better the sunny desert resort than the seaside places.

The chronic bronchitic who has a cough all the year round, is also better off in a dry, warm, sunny climate in the winter.

The third group that might be benefited by a winter vacation consists of the growing children. Especially under-par children. Naturally, I do not mean to say that all children need to go away for the winter. Very few of my readers, I imagine, had that advantage, and their health has not suffered from that neglect. Distinctly for growing children a winter vacation is in the luxury class rather than a necessity. But the thin, pale, round-shouldered child with a tendency to rickets or colds, should be given the advantage if possible. For them, probably the real winter resorts — with winter sports and the bracing effect of skating and skiing in Canada, Europe, and the New England mountains, are the ideal places.

In selecting a place to go, the cities that have the most sunshine per annum start off with Phoenix, which has 3,752 hours of sunshine on the average; San Diego, 3,049; Tampa, 2,948; Denver, 2,946; New Orleans, 2,579; Honolulu, 2,840; Colon, 2,413; Toronto, 2,048.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendingen can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed envelope, stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendingen, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Reducing and Gaining Weight", "Feeding Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene", and "The Care of the Hair and Skin". Dinner Stories

NONCHALANT

A young man and woman entered a Pullman sleeper and were immediately put down by other passengers as a bridal couple. But the young pair were so self-possessed that the others began to doubt if their surmise was right, after all.

As the train moved out of the station, however, the young man rose to remove his overcoat, and a shower of confetti fell onto the floor.

The other occupants of the car smiled broadly, but the young man was equal to the occasion.

Turning to his partner, he remarked, loudly: "I've taken the bridegroom's overcoat by mistake!"

asked for help.

"Of course I'll help," he said warmly. "I've nothing whatever to do, and no family ties. My time is my own."

"Good! We'll have a drink on that," Colindale replied, a look of relief, which he tried to hide, appearing momentarily in his eyes.

The two men returned to the Abbey. Then while Colindale was inside telling Lady Severing how he had taken place, a large limousine swept up the drive and came to a halt at the head of the bridge over the lake. Colonel Graham leapt out with the agility of a boy, and a small, ferret-faced man in gaiters fetched out two bloodhounds, masked and leashed.

Reid led the way across the bridge and into the central court where Lady Severing and Colindale were waiting to receive them. The Colonel greeted Hilda coldly, but with extreme politeness.

"I am distressed to hear that my old friend is not to be found. Mr. Reid has suggested that I should try my hounds on the trail, if we can pick it up; and we had better start from Henry's bedroom. There is no telling where the scent may lead us."

"Bloodhounds! You think they would be useful," she said, glancing uneasily at Colindale.

"They never lie, madam," the Colonel said sternly. He turned to Colindale. "Will you take Coats and the dogs to the bedroom, and let them scent something of Sir Henry's? The fewer of us in the room the better. We'll wait here, and if they draw, we can follow. I suppose nothing has been touched?"

Graham was now completely the magistrate, and took command in a natural manner.

"The room is exactly as it was this morning — I gave orders to that effect," Lady Severing said challengingly.

"Good! Lead them on, Coats," Colindale entered the bedroom with a shudder, almost expecting to see the baronet start up and ask what all this fuss was about; but the open bed stared blankly, and the scattered clothes seemed to speak of tragedy.

There was plenty of scent here; Kirton Dan and Kirton Grim, two of the finest hounds in the country, had been unmasked and were sniffing around. Coats held them in leash, and Colindale offered the dress clothes. Dan lifted his jowl and bayed, his red-rimmed eyes shooting fire. He pulled furiously at the leash. There was no hesitancy in his movements now; face to the ground, he was off down the stairs, with Grim equally eager.

The scent led to the baronet's study, a room which he had reserved exclusively for his own use, and which even his wife was not permitted to enter. Colindale, who followed, noted that one of the silver candlesticks that stood on the baronet's desk had gone, and his mind went back to the remark of James the Butler.

Colonel Graham had heard the sound that told him that the scent had been picked up and was warm. He turned to Lady Severing.

"I think, Hilda, it would be as well for you to retire. I will inform you if we find anything."

For a moment a rebellious pouting look came to her face, but the steady eyes told her that he would brook no disobedience, and she knew Colonel Graham of old.

"Very well. I shall be in my sitting room."

"Come on, Reid, there's something going on here I don't like," the Colonel led the way to the house and entered the study.

"Sir Henry has been in here, sir, and stayed some time by the way the dogs are behaving," Coats said, watching keenly.

"Take them to the door," Graham ordered; and Coats had almost to drag them from the room. "Windows shut and barred," the Colonel muttered. "He must have walked out of that room by the door, unless he has been carried."

He closed the door of the study and Coats gave the dogs their heads. They sniffed around for a minute, turning first in the direction from which they had come and then picked up along the corridor without hesitation.

The chase ended at the chapel door, as he knew it must, and the hounds gave tongue, scratching at the door and sniffing beneath it eagerly. The Colonel's face had gone very white, for all his healthy tan, and the mouth was hard set beneath his close-clipped moustache.

"Who has the key of the chapel?" he rasped out in a cracked voice.

"Sir Henry," Colindale answered in a high whisper, for somehow the grim closed door seemed to menace them. "He would never let it out of his charge on account of the valuable altar ornaments and vessels."

"Then get it, please," Colonel Graham snapped. "It is probably in his clothes, or James will know where it is."

Colindale was just moving off, but Reid was too keen on the chase now to wait for the inevitable delay. As the others were talking he took his own key from his pocket and stooped down as though he had just seen it.

"This is the key?" he asked innocently. "It was lying there by the door."

"How the devil did it come there, and the door locked?" Colonel Graham muttered as he inserted it into the lock and pushed open the massive oak doors.

150 Take Part In O. E. S. Installation Services

Miss Hamilton and Mr. Devore Act As Officials

The annual installation of the officers of the Order of the Eastern Star, which was held in the Masonic Temple on Monday evening, was an interesting and enjoyable occasion. About 150 members and visitors were present for the ceremony. Chapters represented were Washington C. H., Columbus, New Holland, Chillicothe, Williamsport, Frankfort, Bloomingburg, Kingston, Adelphi, and Portsmouth.

A dinner at 6:30 preceded the installation. The tables in the dining room were attractively decorated in blue and gold, and lighted with tapers of the same colors. Lovely favors and placecards were at each place.

The chapter room, where the installation was held, was decorated with tall baskets of bronze chrysanthemums. Immediately after the ceremony, Mrs. G. H. Adkins had assumed her station, she graciously welcomed the Worthy Grand Matron Miss Marie Louise Hamilton, Circleville, and the Worthy Grand Patron, P. R. Devore, Columbus, to the East. After the opening ceremony, the worthy matron in a charming manner also welcomed to the east, Past Grand Matrons Mrs. Laura Magrew and Mrs. Bessie Boice of Columbus, Past Grand Patron C. C. Chapplear, Circleville; Grand Representative to Scotland Mrs. Daisy Miller, Frankfort; and Deputy Grand Matron of the 23rd District Mrs. Stella Roush, of Chillicothe.

Retiring addresses were made by the worthy matron, Mrs. Adkins, and the worthy patron, W. E. Hilyard. Mrs. Flora Foerster, in a few well-chosen words, presented a quilt to Miss Hamilton and one to Mrs. Adkins gifts from the Merimakers Sewing Circle. Mrs. Adkins was the recipient of a lovely lamp, a gift from her officers. Immediately preceding the retiring march of the 1936 officers, Mrs. John Brogg sang a solo dedicated to these officers. The melody of the song was "When I Grow to Old to Dream."

The installation of the 1937 officers was faultlessly and impressively carried out with the Worthy Grand Matron Miss Hamilton, as the grand installing officer, Mrs. McGrew, grand installing marshal; Mrs. Boice, grand installing chaplain; Mr. Chapplear as grand installing secretary; Mrs. Edna Crawford, grand installing organist; and Mrs. Mrs. Daisy Price, as grand installing warder. Those installed for the ensuing year, were Mrs. Carl Bennett, worthy matron; Carl Bennett worthy patron; Miss Virginia Marion, associate matron;

Mrs. J. S. Morris, associate matron; Mrs. Lucy B. Price, secretary; Mrs. Alice Cady, treasurer; Mrs. E. S. Shane, conductress; Mrs. W. W. Robinson, associate conductress; Mrs. Daisy Acord, chaplain; Miss Helen Steele, marshal; Mrs. Ervin Leist, organist; Miss Ethel Kirochofer, Adah; Mrs. Virgil Cress, Ruth; Mrs. F. K. Blair, Esther; Mrs. Dwight Steele, Martha; Mrs. T. E. Wilson, Electa; Mrs. Lucille Neuding, warder; and Mrs. W. E. Hilyard, sentinel.

The ladies were lovely in their new formal dresses of shell pink moire taffeta, all made alike. Following the installation, the retiring worthy matron and worthy patron were escorted to the East for the remainder of the evening. Miss Hamilton presented a Past Matron's pin to Mrs. Adkins, and Mrs. Bennett presented a brief case to Mr. Hilyard, in behalf of the chapter. Mrs. Bennett presented a gift to each of her installing officers in appreciation of their assistance.

Following the presentation of gifts interesting remarks were made by the grand officers present and each predicted a most successful and happy year under the administration of the new corps of officers.

The meeting ended with the ritualistic closing of the chapter.

150 Take Part In O. E. S. Installation Services

Miss Hamilton and Mr. Devore Act As Officials

The annual installation of the officers of the Order of the Eastern Star, which was held in the Masonic Temple on Monday evening, was an interesting and enjoyable occasion. About 150 members and visitors were present for the ceremony. Chapters represented were Washington C. H., Columbus, New Holland, Chillicothe, Williamsport, Frankfort, Bloomingburg, Kingston, Adelphi, and Portsmouth.

A dinner at 6:30 preceded the installation. The tables in the dining room were attractively decorated in blue and gold, and lighted with tapers of the same colors. Lovely favors and placecards were at each place.

The chapter room, where the installation was held, was decorated with tall baskets of bronze chrysanthemums. Immediately after the ceremony, the worthy matron Mrs. G. H. Adkins had assumed her station, she graciously welcomed the Worthy Grand Matron Miss Marie Louise Hamilton, Circleville, and the Worthy Grand Patron, P. R. Devore, Columbus, to the East. After the opening ceremony, the worthy matron in a charming manner also welcomed to the east, Past Grand Matrons Mrs. Laura Magraw and Mrs. Bessie Boice of Columbus, Past Grand Patron C. C. Chapplear, Circleville; Grand Representative to Scotland Mrs. Daisy Miller, Frankfort; and Deputy Grand Matron of the 23rd District Mrs. Stella Roush, of Chillicothe.

Retiring addresses were made by the worthy matron, Mrs. Adkins, and the worthy patron, W. E. Hilyard. Mrs. Flora Foerster, in a few well-chosen words, presented a quilt to Miss Hamilton and one to Mrs. Adkins gifts from the Merrimakers Sewing Circle. Mrs. Adkins was the recipient of a lovely lamp, a gift from her officers. Immediately preceding the retiring march of the 1936 officers, Mrs. John Brogg sang a solo dedicated to these officers. The melody of the song was "When I Grow to Old to Dream."

The installation of the 1937 officers was faultlessly and impressively carried out with the Worthy Grand Matron Miss Hamilton, as the grand installing officer, Mrs. McGrew, grand installing marshal; Mrs. Boice, grand installing chaplain; Mr. Chapplear as grand installing secretary; Mrs. Edna Crawford, grand installing organist; and Mrs. Mrs. Daisy Price, as grand installing warder. Those installed for the ensuing year, were Mrs. Carl Bennett, worthy matron; Carl Bennett worthy patron; Miss Virginia Marion, associate matron;

Mrs. J. S. Morris, associate matron Mrs. Lucy B. Price, secretary; Mrs. Alice Cady, treasurer; Mrs. E. S. Shane, conductress; Mrs. W. W. Robinson, associate conductress; Mrs. Daisy Acord, chaplain; Miss Helen Steele, marshal; Mrs. Ervin Leist, organist; Miss Ethel Kirchofer, Adah; Mrs. Virgil Cress, Ruth; Mrs. F. K. Blair, Esther; Mrs. Dwight Steele, Martha; Mrs. T. E. Wilson, Electa; Miss Lucille Neuding, warder; and Mrs. W. E. Hilyard, sentinel.

The ladies were lovely in their new formal dresses of shell pink moire taffeta, all made alike. Following the installation, the retiring worthy matron and worthy patron were escorted to the East for the remainder of the evening. Miss Hamilton presented a Past Matron's pin to Mrs. Adkins, and Mr. Bennett presented a brief case to Mr. Hilyard, in behalf of the chapter. Mrs. Bennett presented a gift to each of her installing officers in appreciation of their assistance.

Following the presentation of gifts interesting remarks were made by the grand officers present and each predicted a most successful and happy year under the administration of the new corps of officers.

The meeting ended with the ritualistic closing of the chapter.

CHICAGO MAROONS ASKED TO QUIT AFTER GRID AID OFFER

Wisconsin Professor's Idea Would Provide Help For Deserving Athletes

RECRUITING CHARGE FIRED

Conference to Discuss Act at Dec. 2 Confab

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—(UP)—The Reynolds plan, devised by a Wisconsin professor seeking aid for deserving athletes, became a storm center in the Big 10 today after editors of the University of Chicago student daily urged the Maroons to withdraw from the conference if it approved the plan.

This New Deal for athletes will go before conference faculty representatives at their annual winter meeting here Dec. 2.

It provides a summer institute for scholastic and athletic leaders among prep school graduates with scholarships awarded on the basis of intensive examinations at the end of the summer session.

Julian A. Kizer, editor-in-chief of the Daily Maroon, attacked the plan as a move to bring "proselytizing into the open as a legal device to be employed by schools in seeking athletes."

Subsidizing? Oh, My

Charging that all except two or three conference schools use "various undercover methods of subsidization," he advocated withdrawal from the Big 10 unless it "cracked down on existing practices of members and adopt a firm policy against any form of subsidization."

Kizer did not list the schools he said were recruiting, nor name those he gave a clean slate.

The Reynolds plan was originated by Robert L. Reynolds, youthful professor in medieval history at the University of Wisconsin. His idea was to place overworked athletes on an educational opportunity par with other students carrying less load in outside activity.

The summer institute would be financed by alumni. Students ranking in the upper brackets both in studies and athletics would receive scholarships for two years to be renewed automatically for two more years if the athletes remain eligible.

Although the Wisconsin faculty has approved the plan, even Reynolds feels the Big 10 may reject it.

"One of the chief objections probably will be that it breaks down the high faculty barrier against professionalism," he said. "Another is it may tend to increase present rivalry and bring about more overemphasis of athletics."

HAIRSTON CASE TO BE DELAYED SEVERAL MONTHS

IRONTON, Nov. 25.—(UP)—Unless the Waterloo Board of Education secures special counsel no immediate action will be taken against Magellan E. Hairston, former coach of the Waterloo Wonders basketball team, in an effort to recover $3,068.11 allegedly due the school's athletic fund, Roy L. Henry, Lawrence county prosecutor, said today.

Henry said his office had been busy with a grand jury session and now have several important criminal trials to conduct, before it could study the case against Hairston.

In cases where a finding has been made against an individual by a state examiner, Henry stated, it generally was the duty of the county prosecutor to institute civil action. However, he said, school boards had a right to draw upon their operating funds to secure outside counsel if it desired.

WRITERS NAME WASHINGTON AS PACIFIC CHOICE

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(UP)—Washington will win the west coast conference title and a bid to represent the Pacific slope in the Rose Bowl by defeating Washington State tomorrow, according to football selections made today by United Press sports writers.

Alabama and Louisiana State defeated but tied, and both seeking invitations to represent the east at Pasadena, will close their seasons triumphant. Alabama will defeat Vanderbilt tomorrow and on Saturday Louisiana will top Tulane.

In Saturday's Army-Navy clash, which will draw a crowd of 101,000—largest in the history of the east—the writers selected Navy on the basis of comparative scores against Notre Dame.

STUDENT DAILY THROWS BIG TEN INTO NEW CONTROVERSY

Buckeye Cagers Visit West and East Coasts

COLUMBUS, Nov. 25.—From coast to coast in nine days' time is the program outlined for the Ohio State basketball team this winter.

The Buckeyes will battle the University of California, Los Angeles branch in Los Angeles, the night of Dec. 31 and nine days later, Jan. 9, they play New University at Madison Square Garden in New York city.

C. L. A., the latter two at Los Angeles. On the way westward Creighton will be met at Omaha, Neb. and the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

The home season will open Dec. 12 when Denison plays here. This will be the annual "Basketball Clinic" game and will culminate a day of basketball activities at the Ohio State gymnasium.

The Western Conference season will open Jan. 11 with Wisconsin furnishing the opposition. The final game is booked for Feb. 27 with the University of Michigan. Conference competition will be furnished by home - and - home games with Wisconsin, Minnesota, Chicago, Indiana, Northwestern, and Michigan. has defeated five Ohio conference opponents, two Buckeye representatives and a pair of stern non-league foes in its triumphant march.

Case was slow to get started and dropped its first two contests to Lehigh and Miami. However, in mid-October Ray Ride had his machine in high gear and since then only Baldwin-Wallace has been able to halt it. The Berens came from behind to snatch a 13 to 12 victory.

The game tomorrow will be the 45th of the series between these Cleveland schools.

TITLE AT STAKE AS MIAMI FACES CINCI BEARCATS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 25.—(UP)—At opposite ends of the state tomorrow two of Ohio's top-ranked college football teams will seek to clinch titles in games which headline an abbreviated Thanksgiving day grid schedule of seven contests.

Powerful Western Reserve, undefeated and untied in nine contests, in matched with its traditional city rival, Case, at Cleveland; and Miami, within striking distance of a Buckeye conference crown for the first time in three years, plays its Arch enemy, the University of Cincinnati at Cincinnati.

Of the other five contests on the holiday card, three will be played on out-of-state fields.

Western Reserve can banish any doubt as to the strength of its claim on the mythical state championship if it hurdles Case.

About This And That In Many Sports

Next Card Dec. 7.

If ye don't know ye ought to know that the next sports card in the C.A.C. gymnasium will probably be Dec. 7 with Al Haft handling practically all the match-making — It will be an all-wrestling card with some of Haft's good boys and some of his not-so-good boys performing. ***

'Nother note: Red Lindsey's name should be added to the list of letter-men of the Red and Black. ***

Murray Not Grigger

Coach Frank Murray of the great Marquette university football team never played a minute of football, yet is one of the finest coaches of the midwest — Marquette, with 2,500 undergrads, has reached the peak of football success but being undefeated until Duquesne turned the trick last week — When it is taken into consideration that Duquesne beat Pitt, that Pitt beat Notre Dame 28-0, and that the Irish in turn whipped Northwestern, earlier conqueror of the Minnesota Gophers, the Milwaukee Dutchmen are not so bad off. ***

Tarzan Has System

Marquette has one of the best line coaches in the country, Tarzan Taylor of Ohio State — One of Tarzan's favorite pastimes is training the vocal chords of his line-men — Other times he has a dancing instructor demonstrate steps to teach them rhythm — "It relaxes them," the roughest line-men Ohio ever had, says. ***

Two coaches nearer home who never had any football experience, but who have made successes of their careers, are Carlton Smith of Beavly and Punk Cartledge of Steubenville. ***

Want to see a football game Thanksgiving afternoon? — Go to Lancaster where the Chillicothe Vikings will be the opponents.

Irish Surprising

One of the major surprises of the grid year is Notre Dame . . . not because of the comeback the team made after that pogrom at Pittsburgh, but the presence on the roster of such names as O'Reilly, McCormack, McCarthy, Sweeney, O'Neill and Cronin . . . reassuring, however, is that fact that there still is a Wojcikowski on the eleven to uphold the old tradition of the "fighting Irish."

VANDALS DISRUPT WPA SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—Vandals by night were filling ditches nearly as fast as WPA workers could dig them by day, according to a report received by the sheriff's office here. Residents of the district asked the aid of the officers in preventing further night activities about the project.

BEEES TAKE OVER POOR BOX SAN JOSE, Cal. (UP)—When the Rev. Father Edward McCallister decided to open the poor box for contributions he had a surprise. It had not been opened for four years, owing to the loss of the combination, and he found it full of bees. There was also $50 inside.

THREE HIGH 11s WITH UNMARKED YEAR'S SLATES

COLUMBUS, Nov. 25.—(UP)—Three major Ohio high school football teams today had reached the pinnacle which 437 scholastic combines set as their goal in early September, an undefeated and untied season.

In the coveted circle and with the right to voice a claim on the mythical state schoolboy championship were Kenton, Massillon and Middletown, all of whose schedules have been terminated.

Another trio of perfect record teams, Cleveland West Tech, Marietta and Martins Ferry, play the concluding contests of their schedules tomorrow and victories for them in the Thanksgiving day contests would enable them to share in the title consideration.

Cleveland West Tech has its holiday foe, Lakewood; Marietta plays the stout Parkersburg, W. Va. eleven; and Martins Ferry tackles Weirton, W. Va.

The list of championship contenders is smaller this year than in the past two campaigns. In 1934, 10 scholastic combines finished the season unbeaten and untied and a year ago the list numbered nine aggregations.

Massillon is the only perfect record eleven of this season which had an unblemished chart last year also. Two of the 1934 claimants of the schoolboy crown bounced back to top-ranked places. They were Middletown and Martins Ferry.

CHICAGO STUDENT DAILY THROWS BIG TEN INTO NEW CONTROVERSY

MAROONS ASKED TO QUIT AFTER GRID AID OFFER

Wisconsin Professor's Idea Would Provide Help For Deserving Athletes

Conference to Discuss Act at Dec. 2 Confab

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—(UP)—The Reynolds plan, devised by a Wisconsin professor seeking aid for deserving athletes, became a storm center in the Big 10 today after editors of the University of Chicago student daily urged the Maroons to withdraw from the conference if it approved the plan.

This New Deal for athletes will go before conference faculty representatives at their annual winter meeting here Dec. 2.

It provides a summer institute for scholastic and athletic leaders among prep school graduates with scholarships awarded on the basis of intensive examinations at the end of the summer session.

Julian A. Kizer, editor-in-chief of the Daily Maroon, attacked the plan as a move to bring "proselytizing into the open as a legal device to be employed by schools in seeking athletes."

Subsidizing? Oh, My Charging that all except two or three conference schools use "various undercover methods of subsidization," he advocated withdrawal from the Big 10 unless it "cracked down on existing practices of members and adopt a firm policy against any form of subsidization."

Kizer did not list the schools he said were recruiting, nor name those he gave a clean slate.

The Reynolds plan was originated by Robert L. Reynolds, youthful professor in medieval history at the University of Wisconsin. His idea was to place overworked athletes on an educational opportunity par with other students carrying less load in outside activity. The summer institute would be financed by alumni. Students ranking in the upper brackets both in studies and athletics would receive scholarships for two years to be renewed automatically for two more years if the athletes remain eligible.

Although the Wisconsin faculty has approved the plan, even Reynolds feels the Big 10 may reject it.

"One of the chief objections probably will be that it breaks down the high faculty barrier against professionalism," he said. "Another is it may tend to increase present rivalry and bring about more overemphasis of athletics."

HAIRSTON CASE TO BE DELAYED SEVERAL MONTHS

IRONTON, Nov. 25.—(UP)—Unless the Waterloo Board of Education secures special counsel no immediate action will be taken against Magellan E. Hairston, former coach of the Waterloo Wonders basketball team, in an effort to recover $3,068.11 allegedly due the school's athletic fund, Roy L. Henry, Lawrence county prosecutor, said today.

Henry said his office had been busy with a grand jury session and now have several important criminal trials to conduct, before it could study the case against Hairston.

In cases where a finding has been made against an individual by a state examiner, Henry stated, it generally was the duty of the county prosecutor to institute civil action. However, he said, school boards had a right to draw upon their operating funds to secure outside counsel if it desired.

WRITERS NAME WASHINGTON AS PACIFIC CHOICE

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(UP)—Washington will win the west coast conference title and a bid to represent the Pacific slope in the Rose Bowl by defeating Washington State tomorrow, according to football selections made today by United Press sports writers.

Alabama and Louisiana State undefeated but tied, and both seeking invitations to represent the east at Pasadena, will close their seasons triumphant. Alabama will defeat Vanderbilt tomorrow and on Saturday Louisiana will top Tulane.

In Saturday's Army-Navy clash, which will draw a crowd of 101,000—largest in the history of the east—the writers selected Navy on the basis of comparative scores against Notre Dame.

Buckeye Cagers Visit West and East Coasts

COLUMBUS, Nov. 25.—From coast to coast in nine days' time is the program outlined for the Ohio State basketball team this winter. The Buckeyes will battle the University of California, Los Angeles branch in Los Angeles, the night of Dec. 31 and nine days later, Jan. 9, they play New University at Madison Square Garden in New York city.

The 1936-37 schedule, released today by Coach Harold G. Olsen, calls for 20 games, 13 of them to be played on foreign courts and seven at the state fairground Coliseum, home floor of the Buckeyes.

All American Roll Call

Charles Hamrick Ohio State

TOGETHER with Ed Widscheth of Minnesota, Charlie Hamrick, huge Ohio Stater, ranks as the best tackle in the Big Ten. As such, Charlie is making several All-Big Ten teams and stands a good chance to win consideration for the All-American team.

When we said Charlie was huge, we meant just that. Tall and weighing 250 pounds, Mr. Hamrick closes his collegiate career with even a finer performance than he gave two years ago when he also received mention on several all-teams. Charlie is from Gallipolis, Ohio, one of southern Ohio's hot spots for good high school football players. Prior to this year, 1934 when he was one of the most sensational tacklers in the Big Ten. He suffered a knee injury last season, which handicapped him all year.

TITLE AT STAKE AS MIAMI FACES CINCI BEARCATS

COLUMBUS, Nov. 25.—(UP)—At opposite ends of the state tomorrow two of Ohio's top-ranked college football teams will seek to clinch titles in games which headline an abbreviated Thanksgiving day grid schedule of seven contests.

Powerful Western Reserve, undefeated and untied in nine contests, in matched with its traditional city rival, Case, at Cleveland; and Miami, within striking distance of a Buckeye conference crown for the first time in three years, plays its Arch enemy, the University of Cincinnati at Cincinnati.

Of the other five contests on the holiday card, three will be played on out-of-state fields.

Western Reserve can banish any doubt as to the strength of its claim on the mythical state championship if it hurdles Case.

Next Card Dec. 7.

If ye don't know ye ought to know that the next sports card in the C.A.C. gymnasium will probably be Dec. 7 with Al Haft handling practically all the match-making. It will be an all-wrestling card with some of Haft's good boys and some of his not-so-good boys performing.

'Nother note: Red Lindsey's name should be added to the list of letter-men of the Red and Black.

Murray Not Grigger

Coach Frank Murray of the great Marquette university football team never played a minute of football, yet is one of the finest coaches of the midwest. Marquette, with 2,500 undergrads, has reached the peak of football success but being undefeated until Duquesne turned the trick last week. When it is taken into consideration that Duquesne beat Pitt, that Pitt beat Notre Dame 28-0, and that the Irish in turn whipped Northwestern, earlier conqueror of the Minnesota Gophers, the Milwaukee Dutchmen are not so bad off.

Tarzan Has System

Marquette has one of the best line coaches in the country. Tarzan Taylor of Ohio State. One of Tarzan's favorite pastimes is training the vocal chords of his linemen. Other times he has a dancing instructor demonstrate steps to teach them rhythm. "It relaxes them," the roughest linemen Ohio ever had, says.

Two coaches' nearer home who never had any football experience, but who have made successes of their careers, are Carlton Smith of Beavly and Punk Cartledge of Steubenville.

Want to see a football game Thanksgiving afternoon? Go to Lancaster where the Chillicothe Vikings will be the opponents.

Irish Surprising

VANDALS DISRUPT WPA

SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—Vandals by night were filling ditches nearly as fast as WPA workers could dig them by day, according to a report received by the sheriff's office here. Residents of the district asked the aid of the officers in preventing further night activities about the project.

BEEES TAKE OVER POOR BOX

SAN JOSE, Cal. (UP)—When the Rev. Father Edward McCallister decided to open the poor box for contributions he had a surprise. It had not been opened for four years, owing to the loss of the combination, and he found it full of bees. There was also $50 inside.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

TWO BAD DOUBLES

THERE ARE two speculative, hence bad, doubles. One of these is doubling just because it is a "free double". This is when the undoubled contract will yield game if successful. A redouble may prove very expensive. The second bad double is made of a high contract which you are not certain of defeating, when you have great support for partner's call, which you have not yet shown. We have an excellent illustration of each kind of double.

♠ A K 9 7 6 2

♣ A 8 7 3

Bidding went: North, 1-Spade; South, 2-Diamonds; North, 2-Spades; South, 3-Clubs; North, 4-Spades, which East doubled; North, redoubled, knowing the doubler's proclivity, and hoping to teach him a lesson.

The opening lead was the J of clubs. Dummy played low, allowing West to make his K. The 5 of spades was returned, to prevent dummy from ruffing a heart. Declarer played low. East's Q won the second defensive trick. The 3 of diamonds was led. The Ace won and at the same time enabled declarer to let go one of his heart losers.

A low diamond was ruffed. The next two tricks were taken with the Ace and K of spades, clearing out opposing trumps. The Q of clubs was taken. Declarer's last club was led. The Ace won the trick. Both missing clubs fell, allowing declarer to discard his last low heart on the established 8 of clubs. The lone heart was led from dummy. Declarer's Q lost the third and last defensive trick, leaving declarer nothing except the good K of hearts and his two good trumps, just giving him two good trumps, just giving him two good trumps, just giving him two good trumps.

Unfortunately the finish was too close to teach East much of a lesson. Probably he will need many and more decisive losses to teach him not to double too freely.

Here is the more flagrant case of a bad double. South made an opening bid of 4-Diamonds. West overcalled with 4-Spades. North jumped to 6-Diamonds, correctly assuming partner void of spades. East doubled, and defenders won only one trick. East should have supported his partner, and made a grand slam.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

TWO BAD DOUBLES

THERE ARE two speculative, hence bad, doubles. One of these is doubling just because it is a "free double". This is when the undoubted contract will yield game if successful. A redouble may prove very expensive. The second bad double is made of a high contract which you are not certain of defeating, when you have great support for partner's call, which you have not yet shown. We have an excellent illustration of each kind of double.

Bidding went: North, 1-Spade; South, 2-Diamonds; North, 2-Spades; South, 3-Clubs; North, 4-Spades, which East doubled; North, redoubled, knowing the doubler's proximity, and hoping to teach him a lesson.

The opening lead was the J of clubs. Dummy played low, allowing West to make his K. The 5 of spades was returned, to prevent dummy from ruffing a heart. Declarer played low. East's Q won the second defensive trick. The 3 of diamonds was led. The Ace won and at the same time enabled declarer to let go one of his heart losers.

A low diamond was ruffed. The next two tricks were taken with the Ace and K of spades, clearing out opposing trumps. The Q of clubs was taken. Declarer's last club was led. The Ace won the trick. Both missing clubs fell, allowing declarer to discard his last low heart on the established 8 of clubs. The lone heart was led from dummy. Declarer's Q lost the third and last defensive trick, leaving declarer nothing except the good K of hearts and his two good trumps, just giving him his doubled and redoubled contract. Unfortunately the finish was too close to teach East much of a lesson. Probably he will need many and more decisive losses to teach him not to double too freely.

METHODIST MEN HEAR SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT DISCUSS STRIFE IN EUROPE

LEROY SHANER IS ELECTED AS NEW PRESIDENT

Italy and Japan Following Footsteps of U. S. in Aggressive Moves

TURKEY DINNER SERVED Inconsistency Disclosed in Nation's Practices

At the Methodist Men's Club meeting Tuesday evening, there was about a 50 percent attendance. This lack of interest and attendance is to be regretted for two very good reasons. First, because of the exceptional and excellent roast turkey dinner served under the auspices of the Foreign Missionary Society, planned and directed by Mrs. S. G. Rader.

Second, because of the splendid and enlightening address by Frank Fischer, superintendent of schools, on the international situation as respects the spread of Fascism and Communism as well as the outlook for another World War.

Maps and Speaker The address was aptly illustrated by maps on which he pointed out the relationship of the growing and ever-increasing menace to democratic government. Speaking of wars of aggression, he pointed out that Italy, for example, to make room for its rapidly growing population, must have additional territory, hence the Ethiopian war; that Japan, for the same reason, must acquire more room for her teeming millions by slicing off China a piece of territory now and then; both doing exactly what the United States did itself when it drove backward to almost extinction, the American Indian to make room for the white race.

In referring to the preachers for peace at home and abroad, Mr. Fischer pointed out the inconsistency of our efforts to that end when he called attention to the pomp and pageantry of our national holidays; the marching of the children to the martial music of life and drum; the boys of the Legion in military costume bearing on their shoulders, the guns and bayonets manufactured expressly for use in times of war; flags flying and cannons booming — all calculated to create in the minds of the young, the necessity, glory and chivalry of war.

The business of the meeting consisted mainly in the election of a new president to supply the vacancy caused by the resignation of Carl D. Bennett.

Shaner New President

Leroy T. Shaner was elected the president, Henry T. McCrady is the new secretary, and Charles H. Radcliff is treasurer.

Group singing was led by Meeked Terwilliger and H. W. Plum with Mrs. Frank H. Kline, Jr., as pianist. The program included several games.

About fifty members were present.

The agreement as announced bands Germany, facing Russia across some 200 miles of Polish and Lithuanian territory, and Japan with a foothold in Manchukuo on Russia's Siberian frontier, against the communism which is regarded as essentially Russian.

Signature of the agreement finds Germany angry to the breaking point because a Russian court has sentenced to death Emil Stickling, German engineer, on the charge of sabotage.

At Granville avenue station is a switch where every night the schedules bring the express and the "EL" train into juxtaposition. It calls for delicate timing.

The blunt nose of the express sliced 40 feet down the center of the 50-foot wooden coach. The sides splintered and burst spewing humanity in screaming heaps into the street below or on the opposite track and charged third rail.

Lights in both trains and the station went out but a blue electrical flame cast a eerie flickering illumination over the scene of panic.

Screams of the injured rent the night air as heads popped from nearby apartment windows. A few moments later sirens of police cars, ambulances and fire engines added to the din.

Bed Sheets Bandages Apartment dwellers dashed from their houses with bed sheets and clothing which they ripped into bandages for the injured lying in the street.

A woman was thrown across the third rail. Over and over she screamed "I'm burning!" until the power was shut off and she was dragged away.

The dead and injured probably represent the entire occupants of the rear coach. No one could have survived the impact as the 50-foot car was ground down to 10, the rear truck thrust up against the front and the roof scraped over the first car of the express.

Aboard the express only Motor-man Grooms was injured and he not critically. He was shocked and incoherent in Evanston hospital.

"I was traveling about 40 miles an hour," he told police. "Then I saw two red lights on the rear of the Evanston train. The lights were very dim. I put on the brakes and that's the last I remember."

Police Captain Martin McCormick labeled the statement "unsatisfactory" and told Sergeant J. J. Fanning and two policemen to stand guard over Grooms' ward. Company officials who sought to question Grooms were turned away.

Crew Faces Grilling Members of the Rapid-Transit train crew were held for questioning on order of Police Commissioner Joseph Altman. Forward of the wooden coach nobody in the rammed train suffered more than a shaking up.

to be invited to adhere.

Italy's adherence is expected to follow soon, not only to the agreement as announced but to any other measures which may be decided on.

The agreement as announced bands Germany, facing Russia across some 200 miles of Polish and Lithuanian territory, and Japan with a foothold in Manchukuo on Russia's Siberian frontier, against the communism which is regarded as essentially Russian. Signature of the agreement finds Germany angry to the breaking point because a Russian court has sentenced to death Emil Stickling, German engineer, on the charge of sabotage.

SEVEN AGENCIES OPEN INQUIRIES IN TRAIN CRASH

All-Steel Express Speeds Into Halted All-Wood Passenger-Carrier

6 p. m.—height of the rush period—and both trains were loaded heavily. Most passengers were downtown office workers, others shoppers carrying Thanksgiving day parcels.

At Granville avenue station is a switch where every night the schedules bring the express and the "EL" train into juxtaposition. It calls for delicate timing.

The blunt nose of the express sliced 40 feet down the center of the 50-foot wooden coach. The sides splintered and burst spewing humanity in screaming heaps into the street below or on the opposite track and charged third rail.

Lights in both trains and the station went out but a blue electrical flame cast a eerie flickering illumination over the scene of panic.

Screams of the injured rent the night air as heads popped from nearby apartment windows. A few moments later sirens of police cars, ambulances and fire engines added to the din.

Bed Sheets Bandages

Apartment dwellers dashed from their houses with bed sheets and clothing which they ripped into bandages for the injured lying in the street.

A woman was thrown across the third rail. Over and over she screamed "I'm burning!" until the power was shut off and she was dragged away.

The dead and injured probably represent the entire occupants of the rear coach. No one could have survived the impact as the 50-foot car was ground down to the front and the roof scraped over the first car of the express.

Aboard the express only Motor-man Grooms was injured and he not critically. He was shocked and incoherent in Evanston hospital.

"I was traveling about 40 miles an hour," he told police. "Then I saw two red lights on the rear of the Evanston train. The lights were very dim. I put on the brakes and that's the last I remember."

Police Captain Martin McCormick labeled the statement "unsatisfactory" and told Sergeant J. J. Fanning and two policemen to stand guard over Grooms' ward. Company officials who sought to question Grooms were turned away.

Crew Faces Grilling

Members of the Rapid-Transit train crew were held for questioning on order of Police Commissioner Joseph Allman. Forward of the wooden coach nobody in the rammed train suffered more than a shaking up.

Among those who rushed forward from the north shore train to pick up the dead and dying were four Roman Catholic priests. They moved swiftly but calmly, helping injured across the third rail to the station platform, kneeling to administer the last sacraments in the blue glare of sputtering arcs to many who lay mangled and still.

Police Captain Martin McCormick labeled the statement "unsatisfactory" and told Sergeant J. J. Fanning and two policemen to stand guard over Grooms' ward. Company officials who sought to question Grooms were turned away.
